The B. & O. Improvement.
Almost anything would be an improvement that would get the B. & O. tracks off Sixteenth street. They not only disfigure and encumber a street that is naturally one of Wheeling's main highways, but, crossing Main and Market and Chapline streets at grade, they prove a constant obstruction to travel that cannot afford to be impeded.

Street cars must wait on Main and Market streets, and every soul in them, no matter how urgent his business, must wait till the trains and the clouds of smoke roll by. In consequence of a heavy grade and the curve at Chapline street the trains and the smoke do not always pass quickly. Notwithstanding all the black smoke that two locomotives can puff, the work of getting a heavy freight train up the grade is often much too deliberate for the comfort and the business of Wheeling.

The misfortune of the situation is that the railroad company is there and may, if it please, remain there till the crack of doom. The company has professed to be willing to adopt any practical plan of relief to the city. It happens that the problem is not easily solved. In an interview published in to-day's INTELLIGENCER Col. Robinson, of the B. & O., outlines a plan which the company has in mind as the best solution that can be reached. The company will give up Sixteenth street and sell to the city at a reasonable price the square now used for a yard between Sixteenth and Seventeenth and Chapline and Eoff, provided the city will secure for the company a right of way from the creek east on Seventeenth. On Seventeenth street the railroad company agrees to build a viaduct that will cross all the streets to Eoff at twelve feet in the clear above grade.

It is obvious that this would be an immense gain to the city from whatever point of view considered. There are not many valuable buildings in the way, but such as there are the city would have to buy. The question is whether the people would rather let the tracks remain where they are or pay the cost of the proposed right of way.

The company's plan contemplates a straight line after crossing Market street, cutting through the property on the south side of Seventeenth. A straight road counts for something with a railroad company, but if the city is unwilling to be at the cost of buying the property that would have to be used, and would prefer to permit the use of Seventeenth street running along that property, it might be that the company would forego the advantage of a straight line and consent to this modification of its plan.

Seventeenth street from Market to Chapline is little more than an alley, in no way to be compared, of course, with Sixteenth street within the same boundaries. A structure similar to that of the elevated railroads could be built that would permit surface traffic of all kinds just before. The railroad would have the use of the street, but the street would not be closed.

This seems to be the last chance to do something, and Wheeling cannot afford to lose it. The plan now proposed, subject to such modifications as may be desirable and practicable, offers a basis of negotiation. If the city and the company are both in earnest, a solution will be reached somewhere along the proposed line.

The B. & O. Improvement.

ask whether Welsh tin plate is all coated with tin from the Welsh mines? And suppose we had no tin in this country, would it follow that we should continue to buy our tin plate abroad, when we could make it here?

Sees the Error of Judgment.
The mind of His Royal Highness of Wales works slowly. It was necessary to "bring to his attention" the little affair in which he had been engaged at Tranby Croft; to give him time and opportunity to "look back on all the circumstances" of that remarkable series of sittings at the gambling table, before he could realize that he had committed an "error of judgment."

Several millions of people not so highly educated as the Prince of Wales is supposed to be were keen enough to take it all in as soon as they heard of it, and these discovered much more than the prince did with his better opportunities and his graver reasons for appreciating the whole truth.

Evidently the error of judgment which Albert Edward now perceives lies in the fact that he broke the eleventh commandment, about the only one which men of his stamp hold sacred—Thou shalt not permit thyself to be caught. Aside from the possible results that may come to him by reason of the exposure, the prince no more regrets what he did than he regrets any other of the moral lapses into which he falls as often as occasion presents itself.

No doubt Sir William Gordon Cumming would have been glad to "fess up" in this mild way, but he was not of importance enough to get the chance.

Water Motor Charges.

The city should have a fair price for whatever service it renders. It has not had this from some of the owners of water motors, and it now seeks to move them up. It is complained, however, that the proposed new tariff of charges is not equitable and that the general level is too high.

Without expert testimony it is impossible to say whether the complaint is well founded. The city should furnish the service as cheap as it can without loss to itself, and it should endeavor to treat all customers alike. Perhaps the users of water motors would prefer meters, so that they may be charged for what water they use and no more.

Water motors are used for business purposes where steam would be impracticable, and the city should foster, not obstruct, all legitimate business interests.

A Man and a Brother.

An advertiser in the New Haven Register reaches for business in this skillful way:

A few boarders wanted by private family. Can dress as you please.

This is the kind of country board the tired city man is looking for, where he doesn't have to appear at breakfast with a Prince Albert buttoned to the chin, may struggle in to the noonday meal in a flannel shirt, and at eventide may wear a straw hat and slippers if his taste runs that way. If the advertiser were not so remote from Wheeling the INTELLIGENCER would like to make a deal with him. These are trying days.

Timely Advice.

Referring to our files of the heated term of the past year and the years before that, we find that the INTELLIGENCER advised its friends and its enemies, if it had not to permit nothing to ruffle them, wear tight clothing, beware of too much cold drink, steer clear of alcohol hidden in ice, don't eat too much, avoid all heavy food, and altogether make the best of an uncomfortable situation. This good advice is as good to-day as it ever was, and it is worth more than its weight in gold.

Nothing serious stands in the way of placing letter boxes on the street cars, and the departure would be a great convenience to the public. Any light box securely locked would answer the purpose. Every conductor could be sworn in as every employee of the Postoffice Department is. Moreover the car boxes would be as much in the public eye as the street corner boxes are and no more liable to be plundered.

While the Ohio Republicans are looking for a good man and a representative farmer to nominate for lieutenant-governor, the INTELLIGENCER takes the liberty of remarking that Hon. A. T. McKelvey is that sort of man and farmer and quite fills the bill. Belmont county would show her appreciation of the compliment, and Belmont is a county not to be sneezed at.

A New York man got drunk, his fancy lightly turned to a running brook, he drank of its crystal stream, and now he has an snake in his stomach. If he had kept on drinking whiskey, the reptile would have been in his boots, which wouldn't have been so bad. Isn't the moral plain?

THE INTELLIGENCER wishes the Linsly boys a good day and track for their field sports on the Fair Grounds to-day. There are some "good ones" among them, and those who go to look on are likely to see something worth going for. The day promises to be one of the events of the season.

Reply to Assessor Corder.
To the Editor of the Intelligence:

Sir: I see by your paper of this date Assessor Corder, of Barbour county, makes a suggestion. He would have the assessors of this State come together in order to equalize the value of personal property. I do not see what good coming together would do. As the owner lists what he has on the first day of April, he may refuse to show such property to the assessor. The assessor in such case lists such property at its cash value. Assessor Corder says horses are assessed at from $50 to $80 in some counties and the same kind of horses in other counties at $100. The poor man's furniture is from $5 to $20, and the rich man's highest at $100. I have horses listed to me on my personal property books at from $10 to $150, and furniture at from $5 to $500, according to cash value; other property in proportion. As a rule I believe rich and poor in Taylor County list their property at its cash value. If Assessor Corder knows a man affirms to a lie he may indict him, or he may go see his property and list it at its cash value.

Destructive Cloud Burst.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., June 16.—At Neumannville, Greene county, Saturday, a cloud burst did great damage. The place is remote from railroad and telegraph, but information comes to-day of the calamity. The fall of water was something terrific, and a small creek became a raging river one hundred yards wide. The store house, residence and buildings of T. N. King were swept away, the flood coming so quickly he did not have time to even close his store doors. The postoffice was kept in his store and everything was lost. An iron safe weighing 1,500 pounds was carried one-fourth of a mile by the force of the water. A number of other houses were carried away and all crops along the creek bottom lands destroyed. Considerable stock was drowned but no life lost so far as reported. The property damage will amount to a large sum.

A BURNING VILLAGE.

Casselman, Ontario, in Flames—People Fly for Their Lives.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 16.—The village of Casselman, about thirty miles from Ottawa, on the line of the Canada Atlantic railroad, is likely to be entirely consumed by fire. Passengers say the village, when they passed through it last night, was a mass of fire. Immense piles of lumber, measuring millions of feet, and stacks of tanbark, containing thousands of cords, and nearly every house and store in the village were on fire. Men, women and children were rushing toward the woods in a most frantic manner with what little of their household effects they could rescue from their dwellings. There was no possibility of ascertaining whether there had been loss of life, but the destruction of property must have been enormous.

Almost a Panic.

CINCINNATI, O., June 16.—A scene of terror and confusion was presented at the City Hospital last night when the alarm of fire was sounded and flames shot from the basement to roof in the northwest building. Fortunately the fire department made a prompt and ample response and prevented the destruction of the building, and the employees of the hospital removed all the patients without injury. The pecuniary loss is comparatively small.

Not a Failure.

CHICAGO, June 16.—The commission firm of R. W. Dunham & Co., of which ex-Congressman Dunham is the senior partner, gave notice on the Board of Trade this morning that all of their trades would be cleared through the firm of Norton & Worthington. Mr. Dunham stated that the firm had not been making much money lately, owing to bad debts and slow business, and for that reason he had taken this means as the shortest and simplest way out, and that it is in no sense a failure, as all of his trades are protected.

The Railway Telegraphers.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The railway telegraphers met again at 10 o'clock this morning. The first business was the reading of the annual reports of the grand officers. The report of the Grand Chief Telegrapher shows that there has been great activity among the organizers, the membership being increased very materially. The Secretary's report showed a membership of 10,000 in good standing, while the treasury is in excellent condition.

MILWAUKEE, June 16th.—Jas. It was a case of misplaced love. Huggley married the woman, whose maiden name was Mary Dehm, in a Minneapolis house of ill repute, and brought her to this city to reform her. She went back to her old associations, however, and Huggley, in a fit of desperation, shot her. He is under arrest.
